MOOD: 😊 dirty

MUSIC: The Dresden Dolls - Girl Anachronism

The best thing about being a grownup is that if there's a five inch square of somewhat dried-out chocolate muddy water cake left over from Thursday's baking, there's nobody to tell you that you can't cut it into layers, toast them in the toaster over, spread them with cream cheese and eat them for breakfast with lots of black coffee.

And anybody who catches you doing it is likely to want a share.

Muddy water cake? Google's got nuthin'. So do please elaborate! Because that sounds like the best. brekkie. evar.

It's chocolate cake made with coffee and baking chocolate rather than cocoa. Sometimes called Mississippi Mud Cake. It's dense rather than fluffy.

This sounds familiar. Does the topping have marshmallow cream swirled into chocolate, possibly with nuts?

cvillette

January 26 2008, 14:48:42 UTC COLLAPSE

Mine doesn't. But my mom's had mini marshmallows. And pecans. And chocolate chips. Melted together into a kind of... gooey horror movie special effect with thermo-retentive properties.

She was way into the marshmallows under the broiler thing.

Oh! Love the cake, hate the topping. Cake + kreemchz + gallons of coffee = lurve.

Is that like "love the sin, hate the sinner?"

txanne

January 26 2008, 15:03:13 UTC COLLAPSE

Cake is never a sin. Not sharing cake, however, is a sin, unless I'm the one committing the not-sharing, in which case it's only fair.

This sentence brought to you by the League for the Abuse of Commas.

It's muddy water cake if it doesn't have the crap on top, I think.

That'd explain why I'd never heard of it, then--around here it's always got the crap on top.

I might put some cocoa glaze on it. Cocoa, hardly any powdered sugar, water. Guaranteed to make you vibrate into next Tuesday.

Not if I'm washing it down with gallons of black coffee, surely! Sweet cake + bitter coffee!

cvillette

January 26 2008, 15:18:34 UTC

No, no, in the glaze. It will be sweet then. Chocolate + coffee cake. Coffee glaze.

I know, that's what I'm objecting to. Chocolate + coffee cake. Chocolate glaze. Washed down with coffee.

Well, you know. You did take her car keys away last night. And it was after trains had stopped running.

The obvious deduction...

Somebody needed to. (Take her keys away.) And since I was the Designated Sober One...

(I slept on the sofa, okay? And hey, conveniently, I had just changed the bedsheets on Thursday. She probably really thinks I'm gay now.)

I'm still thinking about the ergonomics of her winding up in your bed and you winding up on the couch.

You turned her down?

Hello? first time sex with exceedingly drunken Congressional employee? Date rape charge = career limiting act, man. I'm pretty sure nobody's going to believe "she jumped my bones" as a defense when accused was last seen leaving a public nightspot with plaintiff, who is described by witnesses as "intoxicated to the point of staggering."

I poured two liters of water and four ibuprofen into her and put her to bed.

She is WW in a blonde wig, BTW. No freaking hangover this morning. (!)

And why is it a good thing if they want you to share?

cvillette

January 26 2008, 15:09:11 UTC

COLLAPSE

Because sharing is a classical primate social-bonding behavior, leading to in-group closeness.

Like grooming! I would totally share my cake with you. And pick lice out of your eyebrows.

If you had lice in your eyebrows.
